1. Choosing Your Lead Magnet Type

The right lead magnet format depends on how much effort your audience is willing to spend to get it, and how much effort you're willing to spend to build it. Use the comparison below to choose a format that matches your topic, your resources, and your audience's expectations.

Type	Pros	Cons	Effort Level
Checklist	Fast to build, high perceived value, easy to consume	Feels lightweight; needs a strong topic to stand out	Low
Ebook	Positions you as an authority; great for complex topics	Time-intensive to write and design well	High
Template	Extremely high perceived value; drives real usage	Requires a genuinely useful, reusable structure	Medium
Quiz	Highly engaging; can segment leads by result	Requires quiz logic and result-page content	Medium
Toolkit	Bundles multiple resources; highest perceived value	Most time-consuming to assemble and maintain	High

2. Lead Magnet Outline Template

Fill this out before you design or write a single page of your lead magnet. It forces clarity on the promise, the problem, and the payoff.

Problem Statement (the specific pain this solves)

5 Key Points

2.

3.

4.

5.

Call-to-Action (what should the reader do next?)

Design Notes (format, length, visuals, branding)

3. Landing Page Copy Framework

Use this framework to write the landing page that collects the email address in exchange for your lead magnet.

Headline

Subheadline

3 Bullet Benefits

1.

2.

3.

Form Fields (keep to the minimum needed — usually name + email)

Button Text

Trust Elements (testimonials, logos, subscriber count, privacy note)

4. Thank-You Page Template

The thank-you page is your first chance to build trust and set up the next step — don't waste it on a blank confirmation message.

Confirmation Message (confirm delivery and set expectations)

Next Steps (what should they do while they wait, or right after?)

Upsell Suggestion (a related product, service, or content offer)

5. Email Follow-Up Sequence

A short 3-email sequence turns a one-time download into an ongoing relationship. Use the frameworks below as the backbone for each email.

Email 1 — Delivery

Subject

Body Framework

Deliver the download link immediately and clearly, restate the core promise of the lead magnet in one sentence, and set expectations for what's coming next (e.g., "Over the next few days, I'll send a couple of quick emails to help you get the most out of this."). Keep this email short — its only job is delivery and trust.

Email 2 — Value-Add

Subject

Preview Text

Body Framework

Send this 2-3 days after delivery. Share one additional tip, example, or quick win that builds directly on the lead magnet's topic — something that wasn't in the original download. This email should give real value with no ask, reinforcing that subscribing was worth it.

Email 3 — Soft Pitch

Subject

Preview Text

Body Framework

Send this 4-5 days after delivery. Connect the dots between the problem the lead magnet solved and a paid product or service that solves the next, bigger problem. Keep the pitch low-pressure — one clear offer, one clear benefit, one clear CTA — and make it easy to say no without feeling like the relationship ends there.

6. Lead Magnet Promotion Checklist

A lead magnet only works if people see it. Work through this checklist to make sure your offer is placed everywhere your audience already spends time.

- ☐ Website popup or slide-in configured on high-traffic pages.
- ☐ Dedicated CTA added to the bottom (or sidebar) of relevant blog posts.
- ☐ Link added to your social media bio across all active platforms.
- ☐ Link or mention added to your email signature.
- ☐ Mentioned in your bio on any guest posts you publish.
- ☐ Promoted via at least one paid social ad targeting your ideal audience.
- ☐ Included in a newsletter swap with a complementary, non-competing partner.
- ☐ Mentioned on a relevant podcast appearance or your own podcast, if applicable.
- ☐ Linked in the description of any related YouTube videos.
- ☐ Turned into a Pinterest pin linking back to the landing page.
- ☐ Shared as a native LinkedIn post with a clear, scroll-stopping hook.
- ☐ Shared in relevant online communities or forums where self-promotion is allowed.
- ☐ Linked from a dedicated resources page on your website.
- ☐ Included in a retargeting ad aimed at recent website visitors who didn't convert.
- ☐ Offered to affiliate partners as an incentive to promote alongside their own content.

7. Performance Metrics Dashboard Layout

Recreate this layout in your analytics tool or a spreadsheet to keep a single, ongoing view of how your lead magnet is performing.

Metric	Definition	Target Benchmark
Downloads	Total number of times the lead magnet has been delivered.	Trending up month over month
Conversion Rate	Landing page visitors who submit the form, divided by total visitors.	20%+ for a focused, single-offer page
Email Signups	New subscribers added to your list as a direct result of this lead magnet.	Match or exceed download count
Cost Per Lead	Total promotion spend divided by number of leads generated (paid channels only).	Below your average customer value ÷ 10
